

carefully. The bark of these trees always hid insects. As long as she kept pecking, move in the undergrowth nearby. It was a fox on the hunt. She screeched venture in the forest might yield something interest
t. He stealthily snuck between the trees, staying l stomach and a touch of disappointment he retur unting. Slowly and carefully he inched closer. The ed his approach. Rabbit would settle nicely in his s glared at the bird before returning to the hunt.

Something big was wandering through the forest. She looked out from the bushes ar. The deer escaped.

He felt nervous in the woods. So end. He sighed and chewed some herbs. There must b rn him? He looked deeper into the forest and froze.

e bark of these trees always hid insects. As long as she kept pecking, she would have

